About PASA

Established in 2004, by then Mayor David Cicilline and over 100 community after school leaders, youth and educators, PASA has a mission to help close persistent opportunity gaps by expanding and improving quality after school, summer and other out-of-school time learning opportunities for all the youth of Providence by organizing a sustainable public-private partnership that contributes to student success and serves as a national model. PASA has served as a model of what a city system-wide after school intermediary can achieve.

For 17 years this system has provided access to high quality after school arts, sports, STEM and career-related programs to over 16,000 middle and high school youth attending Providence's public middle and high schools. By building a well-organized system of quality after school programs, bolstered by a nationally recognized continuous quality improvement approach with over 50 community-based and public sector partners, PASA has leveraged a mix of public and private funding that has helped expand and stabilize the after school field locally.
